

Fred Meijer Standale Trail

The 6.5-mile Fred Meijer Standale Trail is a series of nicely landscaped paved paths and elevated boardwalks that connect the Walker Sports Complex with the trails in Millennium Park. In 2016, a tunnel was built offering safe passage under Lake Michigan Drive in Standale. The Fred Meijer Standale Trail is viewed as an important “keystone” connector for the Grand Rapids Metro Area Trails Network that will eventually link the Fred Meijer Pioneer Trail in northern Kent County to an extensive network of trails in southern Kent County.

Along its north/south route, the trail travels through a series of neighborhoods, providing Walker and Standale residents with easy access to this great recreational resource. The terrain is mostly flat with some hilly sections. From a leisurely stroll to a vigorous workout, the Fred Meijer Standale Trail is a great way to experience the natural beauty of this West Michigan community.

Fred Meijer Millennium Park Trails

Load up your bikes or running shoes (and don't forget your picnic basket and swimming suit) and head to this recreation destination just west of Grand Rapids. Double the size of New York City's Central Park, Millennium Park encompasses 1,500 acres of wetlands, lakes and rolling terrain between Johnson Park and John Ball Park along the banks of the Grand River. Known for its swimming beach, splash park, fishing docks and huge playground, the park includes an extensive network of nearly 20 miles of paved bicycle paths and improved nature trails. This network of trails guides you through the park's natural features and along several lakes, ponds and wetlands teaming with wildlife and migratory waterfowl. Several new trails and boardwalks, a huge trestle bridge, picnic pavilion and amphitheater were added to the park in 2016 on the east side of Maynard Avenue known as Secchia Meadows – a great place to start your ride around the park.

Fred Meijer Standale Trail • Fred Meijer Millennium Park Trails